BENCH DECISION

Statement of the Case

MICHAEL A. MARCIONESE, Administrative Law Judge. I heard this case in New Orleans, Louisiana, on June 12, 2006. International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Local Union No. 270 (“the Union”) filed the charge on November 4, 2005¹ and amended it on November 23 and again on January 9, 2006. On March 31, 2006, the Board’s General Counsel issued the complaint alleging that the Respondent, Coastal Cargo Company, Inc., violated Section 8(a)(1) and (5) of the Act by implementing changes in its employees’ wages, hours and other terms and conditions of employment in the absence of a good-faith impasse in collective-bargaining negotiations with the Union.² The Respondent filed its answer to the complaint on April 14, 2006 denying that it committed the alleged unfair labor practices. In its answer, the Respondent conceded that it made certain changes to employees’ terms and conditions of employment when it implemented its “last, best and final offer”, but asserted that the parties had reached impasse before the proposal was implemented.

After hearing the testimony of the witnesses, reviewing the documentary evidence offered by the parties, and considering the arguments made by counsel in pre-trial memoranda and in closing arguments, I rendered a bench decision in accordance with Section 102.35(a)(10) of the Board’s Rules and Regulations. For the reasons stated by me on the record, I found that the parties had not reached a good-faith impasse in negotiations when the Respondent implemented its last contract proposal on October 17 and that the changes resulting from the implementation violated Section 8(a)(1) and (5) of the Act, as alleged in the complaint. I also recommended dismissal of three paragraphs of the complaint that alleged specific changes in terms and conditions of employment for which there was no evidence to support the allegation.

² Counsel for the General Counsel amended the complaint at the hearing to withdraw one allegation regarding a specific change in employees’ terms and conditions of employment.

I hereby certify the accuracy of the portion of the transcript, pages 113 through 135, containing my bench decision.³ A copy of that portion of the transcript, as corrected, is attached to this decision as “Appendix A”

Conclusions of Law

1. By implementing its “last, best and final offer” on October 17, 2005, at a time when the Respondent and the Union had not reached a good-faith impasse in negotiations, the Respondent has failed to bargain in good faith with the Union and has engaged in unfair labor practices affecting commerce within the meaning of Section 8(a)(1) and (5) and Section 2(6) and (7) of the Act.

2. The Respondent did not make the specific unilateral changes to employees’ terms and conditions of employment alleged at paragraphs 10(a), 10(f)(3) and 10(h) of the complaint.

Remedy

25

Having found that the Respondent has engaged in certain unfair labor practices, I find that it must be ordered to cease and desist and to take certain affirmative action designed to effectuate the policies of the Act. Specifically, I shall recommend that the Respondent be ordered to rescind any changes it made to employees’ wages, hours and other terms and conditions of employment when it implemented its October 13 contract proposal on October 17 and to make whole any employees who lost wages or benefits as a result of the unilaterally implemented changes. I shall also recommend that the Respondent be ordered to bargain with the Union, upon request, on the terms of a new collective bargaining agreement to replace the expired agreement and to refrain from making any changes to employees’ wages, hours and other terms and conditions of employment in the absence of agreement with the Union or a good-faith impasse in negotiations. Respondent shall also post a Notice to Employees.

30

On these findings of fact and conclusions of law and on the entire record, I issue the following recommended⁴

ORDER

35

The Respondent, Coastal Cargo Company, Inc., its officers, agents, successors, and assigns, shall

1. Cease and desist from

(b) In any like or related manner interfering with, restraining, or coercing employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed them by Section 7 of the Act.

2. Take the following affirmative action necessary to effectuate the policies of the Act.

(e) Within 14 days after service by the Region, post at its facilities in New Orleans, Louisiana and Pascagoula, Mississippi, copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix B."⁵ Copies of the notice, on forms provided by the Regional Director for Region 15, after being signed by the Respondent's authorized representative, shall be posted by the Respondent and maintained for 60 consecutive days in conspicuous places including all places where notices to employees are customarily posted. Reasonable steps shall be taken by the Respondent to ensure that the notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material. In the event that, during the pendency of these proceedings, the Respondent has gone out of business or closed the facility involved in these proceedings, the Respondent shall duplicate and mail, at its own expense, a copy of the notice to all current employees and former employees employed by the Respondent at any time since October 17, 2005.

(f) Within 21 days after service by the Region, file with the Regional Director a sworn certification of a responsible official on a form provided by the Region attesting to the steps that the Respondent has taken to comply.

⁵ If this Order is enforced by a judgment of a United States court of appeals, the words in the notice reading "Posted by Order of the National Labor Relations Board" shall read "Posted Pursuant to a Judgment of the United States Court of Appeals Enforcing an Order of the National Labor Relations Board."

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the complaint paragraphs 10 (a), 10(f)(3) and 10(h) are dismissed insofar as they allege violations of the Act not specifically found.

Dated, Washington, D.C., June 30, 2006.

113

JUDGE MARCIONESE: Okay. Good afternoon, gentlemen. As I

4 indicated before we took our lunch break, I had decided I would 5 review my notes and consider the arguments, and then prepare a 6 bench decision, and I am now prepared to do so.

7 Now, under the Board's rules and regulations, a bench
8 decision is required to basically satisfy the same criteria 9 requirements that a formal, written decision by an 10 Administrative Law Judge, including certain necessary factual
11 determinations that you would find in any typical ALJ decision, 12 so I will go through a lot of this, which may seem somewhat 13 technical, but these are the requirements of a formal decision.

14 (Whereupon, the bench decision in the above-entitled 15 matter follows.)

16 BENCH DECISION

17 JUDGE MARCIONESE: Now, the charge in this case was filed 18 by the Teamsters Local 270 on November 4, 2005, amended twice, 19 November 23, 2005, and January 9, 2006, and Respondent in its 20 answer has admitted the filing and service of the charge and the 21 amended charges.

22 On March 31, 2006, based on the charges as amended, the 23 General Counsel issued the complaint and notice of hearing that 24 is before me, in which it is alleged that the Respondent,
25 Coastal Cargo Company, Incorporated, violated Section 8(a)(1)

1 and (5) of the Act on October 17, 2005, by implementing its 5 2 final contract proposal in the absence of a good-faith impasse 3 in bargaining.

4 The complaint alleges that as a result of this 10 5 implementation, Respondent made a number of specifically alleged 6 changes to employees' wages, hours, and terms and conditions of 15 7 employment. On April 12, 2006, the Respondent filed its answer
8 to the complaint, denying that it committed the unfair labor 9 practices alleged, while admitting that it, in fact, had 20 10 implemented its last, best and final offer, quote/unquote, and 11 that it changed employees' terms and conditions of employment.

25 12 The Respondent asserted affirmatively that it did so after 13 the union members had unanimously rejected the offer.
14 Respondent admitted making most of the specifically enumerated
30 15 changes but did dispute several of the General Counsel's 16 allegations.

35 17 Now, having now heard the testimony of the witnesses and 18 reviewed the documentary evidence offered by the parties and 19 after considering the arguments that were raised, both in the 40 20 pretrial memoranda as well as in the closing arguments presented 21 orally on the record, I am now prepared to issue my decision 45 22 from the bench pursuant to Section 102.35(a)(10) of the Board's 23 rules and regulations.

50 24 Now, with respect to jurisdiction, the Respondent has 25 25 admitted all of the jurisdictional facts alleged by the General

1 Counsel and has also admitted that it is an employer engaged in 5 2 commerce within the meaning of Section 2, paragraphs 2, 6, and 7
3 of the Act, and that the Charging Party is a labor organization 4 within the meaning of Section 2, paragraph 5, of the Act. Based 10 5 on these admissions, I make the following findings:

6 That at all material times, Respondent, a corporation with 15 7 a place of business in New Orleans, Louisiana, herein called its 8 facility, has been engaged in the longshoring and stevedoring 9 industry;

20 10 That annually the Respondent, in conducting its business 11 operations, derives gross revenues in excess of 50,000, for 25 12 transportation of freight from the state of Louisiana directly 13 to points outside the state;

30 14 And that in conducting its business operations, performs 15 services valued in excess of $50,000 in states other than the 16 state of Louisiana;

35 17 That in conducting its business operations within the 18 state of Louisiana and that the Respondent derived gross 19 revenues in excess of $50,000 for the transportation of freight 40 20 and interstate commerce under arrangements with various common 21 carriers, each of which operates between various states of the 45 22 U.S.;

23 And that based on its operations, it functions as an 24 essential link in the transportation of freight and interstate 50 25 commerce;

1 And that annually Respondent, in conducting operations,
5 2 purchases and receives at the New Orleans facility goods valued 3 in excess of 50,000 directly from points outside the state of 4 Louisiana.

10 5 Now, with respect to the specific unfair labor practices 6 alleged in the complaint, many of the facts are undisputed, and 15 7 based on the admissions and the answer that were filed by the 8 Respondent or based on the testimony and other evidence that 9 I've seen here today, there's no dispute that the union has been 20 10 the recognized exclusive collective-bargaining agent of a unit 11 of Respondent's employees since about 1985, within the meaning 25 12 of Section 9(a) of the Act, and the unit is described in the 13 complaint as consisting of all checkers, lift drivers, loaders,
14 flagmen, et cetera, but excluding company supervisory clerks, 30 15 guards, and supervisors as defined by the Act.

16 And it's also undisputed that the Respondent's recognition 35 17 of the union has been evidenced by a series of collective-18 bargaining agreements and that the most recent one was in effect 19 through September 30 of 2005.

40 20 It's also undisputed that the parties began bargaining for 21 an agreement to succeed that last contract on August 16, 2005, 45 22 and during the negotiations, the Respondent was represented by 23 its executive vice president David Mannella, an admitted 24 supervisor and agent within the meaning of the Act, and the 50 25 union was represented by business agent Dave Negrotto. And both

1 Negrotto and Mannella have testified in the hearing here today.

5 2 Essentially they're the only witnesses that I've heard
3 testimony from, but there appears to be very little dispute 4 about what happened at the various meetings and in the 10 5 conversations, so that I don't find it necessary to make any 6 credibility resolutions with respect to the testimony. And in 15 7 any event, I saw nothing in the demeanor of either witness that 8 would undermine their credibility.

20 9 I'll note that both witnesses, in trying to testify 10 regarding the events that occurred last year were required to 11 refer to their notes fairly often in order to refresh their 25 12 recollection, rather than testifying independently from memory.

13 Now, the negotiations themselves consisted of a total of 14 five meetings on August 16, August 22, September 22, September 30 15 27, and October 3, and several telephone conversations. Now, 16 two of the meetings occurred before Hurricane Katrina, and three 35 17 occurred afterwards. The evidence reveals that at the very 18 first meeting, the union made its proposal, seeking essentially 19 increases in wages and benefits for bargaining-unit employees, 40 20 and all of the union's proposals were economic proposals.

21 At the next meeting on August 22, the Respondent presented 45 22 a complete contract proposal which included some of the existing 23 language in the contract, some new clauses that had not existed 24 previously, changes in language, and some of the existing 50 25 clauses, as well as economic proposals, many of which 1 essentially were for the status quo.

5 2 At this meeting, there's no dispute that the parties were 3 making progress. They essentially began by going through each 4 paragraph of the Respondent's proposal in order to determine 10 5 where there was a change, if there was a change, and then after 6 a break, the union went through and agreed to some of the 15 7 proposals, most of which were essentially existing language, and 8 the parties agreed with respect to most of the proposals, 9 particularly economic ones, that they would look at those 20 10 further and set those aside for now.

11 Unfortunately for everyone involved, Hurricane Katrina
25 12 intervened, which caused the parties to cancel their next 13 scheduled meeting for August 29, the day the hurricane arrived.
14 And apparently the parties were unable to meet again until 30 15 September 22, exactly one month from the previous meeting. And 16 that meeting, because of the circumstances of the hurricane, 35 17 ended up occurring away from the normal place of meeting, in 18 fact, at an athletic club near the private residences of the two 40 19 chief spokesmen, without either the union steward or the 20 company's counsel being present.

21 And yet at this meeting, even though the parties had not 45 22 even begun to discuss any of the economic proposals on the 23 table, whether they be the union's economic proposals or the 24 Respondent's economic proposals, the Respondent announced
50 25 somewhat precipitously that it was going to present the union

1 with its, quote, last, best and final offer.

5 2 Now, the notes and the testimony of Negrotto, the union's 3 business agent, which was not contradicted by the Respondent's 4 representative, Mr. Mannella, show that the union, in fact, 10 5 objected to the presentation of the last and final offer, and 6 gave a series of reasons as to why it objected to this 15 7 development in negotiations.

8 And essentially what Mr. Negrotto's notes from that 9 meeting, which were not challenged, show is that he stated a 20 10 number of difficulties he was having as a result of the 11 hurricane, including having no mailing addresses, no phone, no 25 12 meeting place to meet with his members, didn't even know where 13 the membership was to get in contact with them, did not even 30 14 have computers in the union's office, and didn't know who was 15 remaining in the bargaining unit at that point in time.

16 Yet, nevertheless, when the parties met again on September 35 17 27, the Respondent again advised the union that it was going to 18 be presenting it with its last, best and final offer.

40 19 Now, it's not clear from the record whether that offer was 20 presented at that meeting on September 27, which apparently did 21 occur at the company's premises, or whether, as the handwritten 45 22 note on the proposal that was received and placed in evidence by 23 the General Counsel, a note that was written by Mr. Negrotto, 24 indicates that the actual proposal was delivered on September 50 25 28, the next day, when it was left with his wife at 5:00 p.m.

1 So -- but in any event, it's not really that significant,
5 2 whether it was received at the meeting on the 27th or the next 3 day on the 28th. And let's see. What is significant is that 4 after this meeting and being presented, which essentially what 10 5 was described as the last, best and final offer, the parties had 6 really only one meeting and several telephone conversations in 15 7 which to discuss the proposal.

8 And, again, as I noted previously, many of the proposals
9 involved significant changes in employees' terms and conditions 20 10 of employment which could be characterized as give-aways.
11 Subsequent to that one meeting which occurred on October 3 and 25 12 several telephone conversations, it is true that the Respondent 13 did make some changes to what it had previously described as its 14 last, best and final offer, including making some concessions to 30 15 the union, and specifically, they increased the number of 16 absences that would trigger discipline under a new absenteeism 35 17 program that had not previously existed. They agreed to go back 18 to a 50-50 split on the cost of arbitration, and they agreed to 19 essentially keep their share of contributions to the health and 40 20 welfare fund on behalf of unit employees at the existing level 21 rather than requiring employees to assume 50 percent of the 45 22 cost.

23 Now, it's also true -- there's no dispute about this -- 24 that at the same time, while the Respondent was making these 50 25 concessions, the union did not make any discernible moves from

1 its initial proposal. But its willingness to actually make counter-5 2 proposals is evidenced by its flexibility in dealing with the 3 Respondent's proposal. Apparently it appears that from the time
4 the Respondent made its complete contract proposal on September 10 5 22, the negotiations were essentially hijacked to focusing on 6 that proposal rather than the few specifically enumerated 15 7 economic changes that the union had sought in its initial 8 proposal.

9 So I think in terms of the union's indicating its 20 10 willingness to even discuss those proposals and to seek 11 concessions on the proposals that the Respondent had made shows 25 12 that it was flexible, notwithstanding not having made any formal 13 counterproposals or moved off what it initially had presented on 14 August 16.

30 15 Okay. The union ultimately did present the last, best and 16 final offer, the one that was dated October 13 which had 35 17 undergone some changes, including the concessions that I 18 mentioned, as well as some clarifications of language to its 19 membership, despite having stated its reservations about even 40 20 having a vote under the current circumstances and its 21 difficulties in tracking down bargaining-unit members and being 45 22 able to communicate them.

23 And the evidence does indicate, too, that at the time that 24 the union did hold this vote, based on information that was 50 25 presented to it by the Respondent at one of -- at, I think, the

1 October 3 or maybe October 4 meeting, that maybe less than a 5 2 majority of the bargaining-unit employees were actually 3 physically back at work at the time that the union did, in fact, 4 hold this membership meeting.

10 5 And there's no dispute that the membership did unanimously 6 reject the Respondent's last, best and final offer, and that on 15 7 October 14 after the vote, that Mr. Negrotto did communicate the 8 results of the vote to the Respondent. And apparently after 9 being told by the union that the membership for what it was at 20 10 that time had, in fact, unanimously rejected the proposal, the 11 Respondent made a decision to go ahead and implement that offer, 25 12 and informed the union of this the following day, October 15, 13 and, in fact, there's no dispute that the proposal was 14 implemented the following Monday, October 17.

30 15 There's also -- at the same time, there is testimony from 16 Mr. Negrotto that the next step in the process, after the vote 35 17 on the proposal, would have been to conduct a strike vote among 18 the membership, and that he, in fact, was in the process of 19 arranging such a strike vote when the Respondent informed him 40 20 that it was going to go ahead and implement the proposal, and he 21 also testified that he informed Mr. Mannella that he was going 45 22 to be holding a strike vote next. Nonetheless, the Respondent 23 did go ahead and implement the proposal.

50 24 Now, there's no dispute that the union did not make any 25 proposals after having told the Respondent that the membership

1 had rejected the last, best and final offer, nor is there any 5 2 dispute that the union did not make any formal requests for 3 further bargaining sessions after October 15, although Mr.
4 Negrotto claims that he did indicate to Mr. Mannella that he and 10 5 his steward would be available to meet any time. This I do not 6 exactly interpret as a request for bargaining. Just indicating 7 a willingness or being available at any time to meet is not the 15 8 same as actually requesting a meeting.

9 Now, also fact-wise, other than the issue of impasse being 20 10 in dispute, as I indicated previously, the Respondent in its 11 answer did dispute some of the changes, specific changes, that 25 12 the General Counsel alleged were implemented. Now, specifically 13 with respect to paragraph 10, subparagraph (a), the General 14 Counsel alleged that the Respondent changed its policy, allowing 30 15 the Respondent to suspend, transfer, discharge or lay off casual 16 employees for any lawful reason without recourse to the union.

35 17 The only basis for this allegation appears to be the fact 18 that in the final offer that was conveyed to the union and 19 presented to the membership to vote, that language was omitted
40 20 from the article where it had existed in the previous contract, 21 but, in fact, if one looks at the proposal, as well as the notes
45 22 Mr. Negrotto had maintained at the meetings, all the Respondent 23 did is it moved that language from where it previously had 24 existed to Article 4, Section 2, in its proposal, and even the 50 25 August 22 meeting notes show that the union had tentatively

1 agreed to the language being moved to Article 4.

5 2 So with respect to that allegation, there is no evidence
3 that that, in fact, represented any change, and I would dismiss 4 as to paragraph 10(a).

10 5 Similarly, with respect to paragraph 10(f) and 10(h), 6 10(f), subparagraph (3), which alleged the elimination of a ten-15 7 day period during which an employee may appeal a decision to 8 discipline and a 15-day period during which Respondent must 9 respond to an appeal, and 10(h) is eliminating a requirement 20 10 that Respondent pay employees 30 minutes of travel time when 11 employees must travel during mealtime, the allegation also seems 25 12 to be based primarily on the omission of language that existed 13 in the previous contract from the final offer.

30 14 There was certainly no evidence offered in this case to 15 show that Respondent actually did, in fact, implement those two 16 specific changes, that, in fact, you know, there was an 35 17 elimination of a waiting -- of the appeal period, or that there 18 was, in fact, any change in employees being paid for that time.
19 So since there's no evidence to show an actual change other than 40 20 the fact that the language appears or doesn't appear in the 21 final offer, I would have to recommend dismissal with respect to 45 22 those allegations.

23 Now, turning to the law as it applies to the facts in this 24 case, the sole issue here is whether the parties had reached a 50 25 good-faith impasse in negotiations by October 17, 2005, when

1 Respondent implemented its final offer. I note that the General
5 2 Counsel does not allege in this case that the Respondent engaged 3 in any overall bad-faith or surface bargaining, or that there 4 were unremedied unfair labor practices that prevented the 10 5 parties reaching a valid impasse.

6 Rather the General Counsel's argument is that 15 7 notwithstanding the union's members having unanimously rejected 8 the Respondent's final offer, the union had not yet -- the 9 parties, the Respondent and the union, had not yet reached a 20 10 point where further bargaining would be futile and where there 11 was no realistic possibility that continuation of discussion
12 would be fruitful, quoting from the Judge's decision in Bryant &
25 13 Stratton Business Institute, 327 NLRB 1135 at page 1148, a case 14 cited by the General Counsel in his memorandum.

30 15 Now, the Board and the Courts have routinely defined 16 impasse in just those terms, and I'll refer the parties to not 35 17 only Judge Fish's decision in Bryant & Stratton, but in the 18 cases he cites in his decision, as well as the Board's decision 19 in Cotter & Company, at 331 NLRB 787, another case cited by the 40 20 General Counsel, although I would note that the District of 21 Columbia Circuit Court did not enforce the portion of the 45 22 Board's order in Cotter & Company finding an unfair labor
23 practice, instead disagreeing with the Board that no impasse 24 existed. The D.C. Circuit's decision is at 254 F. 3d 1105, and 50 25 that's from 2001.

1 Now, perhaps the lead case on the issue of impasse is Taft 5 2 Broadcasting Company, 163 NLRB 475, a 1967 decision, enforced by 3 the District of Columbia Court of Appeals in 1968 under the name
4 AFTRA versus NLRB, 395 F. 2d 622. In that case, the Board set 10 5 forth a number of criteria or factors to consider in determining 6 whether impasse exists, and these are essentially the factors 15 7 that the Board and the Courts have looked at over the years.

8 In Taft, the Board said that, "whether a bargaining
9 impasse exists is a matter of judgment. The bargaining history, 20 10 the good faith of the parties in negotiations, the length of the 11 negotiations, the importance of the issue or issues as to which 25 12 there is disagreement, the contemporaneous understanding of the 13 parties as to the state of negotiations are all relevant factors 14 to be considered in deciding whether an impasse in bargaining 30 15 existed."

16 And I'll also note finally in terms of the legal 35 17 precedent, that as pointed out by the General Counsel, the 18 burden of proving the existence of an impasse rests with the 19 party claiming impasse, which in this case would be the 40 20 Respondent.

21 Now, looking at the factors cited by the Board in Taft and 45 22 applying them to the facts here, essentially in terms of 23 bargaining history, what we have here is a mature collective-24 bargaining relationship -- a rather long and mature collective-50 25 bargaining relationship in which the parties have bargained for

1 contracts over the years, and based on the testimony of Mr.
5 2 Mannella, sometimes longer periods, other times shorter periods, 3 and there was also some vague, unspecific evidence that, in 4 fact, the most recent negotiations before these involved 10 5 somewhat lengthy negotiations which resulted in a strike, and 6 that many of the proposals, if not all of them, being advanced 15 7 by the Respondent in this case were the same ones that had led 8 to the strike in the prior case.

9 In terms of the good faith of the parties in negotiations, 20 10 as I indicated previously, there is no allegation in this case
11 that the Respondent engaged in any overall bad-faith bargaining
25 12 in negotiations, although the union argues -- and I will address 13 it later, that the way in which the Respondent handled the 14 announcement and implementation of its final offer does indicate 30 15 bad faith.

16 In terms of the length of the negotiations, admittedly 35 17 they are shorter than one would normally expect, although, 18 again, one has to consider that this is not a first contract
19 between the parties. They're dealing with an established 40 20 collective-bargaining relationship, established terms and 21 conditions of employment, and generally where parties are used 45 22 to dealing with one another, they may not need as many meetings 23 in order to reach a point of deadlock.

24 But at the same time, what would sort of counteract that 50 25 is that some of the proposals the Respondent was making here

1 would, in fact, change some terms and conditions of employment

5 2 that had been established for a long time and that those types

3 of negotiations and contentious issues might actually prolong

4 what ordinarily would be a short period of negotiations.

10 5 In terms of the importance of the issue or issues as to

6 which there is disagreement, clearly it appears there was 15 7 disagreement over economic issues. The union had made proposals

8 for significant increases. The Respondent was looking for 9 either reductions in benefits, like the giving up of a holiday,

20 10 change in the way overtime is calculated, or else maintaining 11 economics at the status quo. Those are at the heart and core of 25 12 collective bargaining, and obviously those issues are very 13 important to the parties.

14 And then finally the contemporaneous understanding of the 30 15 parties as to the state of negotiations, which is a somewhat

16 difficult factor to analyze, because it essentially requires

35 17 someone to sort of delve into the state of mind of people and 18 see what is it that they're thinking at a particular point in 19 time, and in this case, the Respondent's witness, Mr. Mannella,

40 20 has indicated that at least in their point of view, they had

21 reached a point where they felt that they could go no further

45 22 and that the union was not going to make any further movement,

23 and so that the parties were, in fact, deadlocked, and further

24 discussions would have been futile.

50 25 At the same time, Mr. Negrotto testified that he did not

1 feel that the union was at a point where they had reached the 5 2 end of their rope in terms of negotiations and that there was a 3 willingness to continue bargaining. Of course, generally what's 4 important is to look for objective evidence that would support 10 5 either of those statements as to a party's particular state of 6 mind at a given point in time, rather than having to rely upon a 15 7 bald assertion one way or another as to whether either party was 8 willing to make a concession or be flexible, because as the 9 Board has indicated, if even one party has indicated that it is 20 10 willing to make concessions, even if they might not seem very 11 significant, as long as they are with respect to a significant 25 12 issue, then you can't have an impasse.

13 Now, in doing my research prior to this, I came across a 14 couple of cases which would seem to suggest the absence of an 30 15 impasse in this particular case. I'll cite Civil Motor Inns, 16 trading as Downtown Holiday Inn, New Haven, 300 NLRB 774, at 35 17 page 776, and I'm intimately familiar with that case since when 18 I was counsel for the General Counsel years ago, I litigated 19 that case.

40 20 And another case is Rochester Telephone, 333 NLRB 30, a 21 2001 case, at footnote 3, where the Board indicated, although 45 22 they found there was an impasse there, they did indicate in the 23 footnote that you cannot have impasse where one party makes a 24 concession that is not trivial or meaningless, over an issue 50 25 that is of significance to either party.

1 Now, in that case -- both those cases actually, Downtown 5 2 Holiday Inn and Rochester Telephone, what the Board and the 3 Judges relied upon is essentially the absence of any significant 4 concession made by the union to a final proposal made by an 10 5 employer. But I think at least in Downtown Holiday Inn, my 6 recollection, the main issue there was whether an impasse had 15 7 been broken. There was already no dispute that the parties had 8 been at impasse. There was a lengthy hiatus, and a question was 9 whether a union's overtures to the employer seeking to resume 20 10 negotiations were sufficient to break the impasse.

11 So those are the cases that I've considered, the cases 25 12 cited by the parties, as well as those that I found myself, and 13 as both the Board and the Courts have noted, impasse is really a 14 question that has to be decided based on the facts and 30 15 circumstances of the particular case at issue. There's really 16 no way to essentially set forth a hard and fast rule as to 35 17 whether, you know, in these circumstances you're going to find 18 impasse or not. You have to look at the facts as presented in 19 the hearing.

40 20 Now, here, while the union's rejection of what Respondent 21 had described as its last, best and final offer, without any 45 22 objective evidence of a willingness to make further movement, 23 under normal circumstances would establish the existence of 24 impasse based on Rochester Telephone and Downtown Holiday Inn.
50 25 Here, I think the unique circumstances that the parties were

1 operating under leads me to the conclusion that the parties

2 could not have been at impasse on October 17.

3 And particularly what I'm focusing on and what I think is

4 very significant here is the intervention of Mother Nature and

5 the impact that Hurricane Katrina had, not only on the parties

6 but on the bargaining unit itself. The parties had not reached

7 the point of futility. Before the hurricane struck, they had

8 really only barely begun to discuss the Respondent's extensive

9 contract proposal, including a number of very significant

10 economic issues, some of which would have resulted in a decline

11 in the employees' wages and benefits.

12 And it appears from the evidence what Respondent did is 13 when the storm had passed and the parties decided to try to get

14 back into negotiations, it elected to take advantage of this

15 situation, the dispersal of the bargaining unit, the 16 difficulties that the union was having in terms of just

17 operating and functioning in its office, to implement

18 significant changes in employees' terms and conditions of 19 employment, before the parties had really even had an 20 opportunity to discuss them seriously or at any length.

21 And essentially I see this as an attempt by the Respondent

22 to get something that they could not have achieved at the 23 bargaining table, if the union had been at full strength and in 24 a position to meaningfully oppose the proposals that the 25 Respondent was making.

1 And, again, the unanimous vote that the parties have 5 2 referred to is really not even a meaningful one, when one
3 considers that a large number of employees in the bargaining
4 unit were not even apparently reachable or accessible in order
10 5 to participate in the vote at the time that the Respondent
6 essentially forced the union to hold a vote of its membership.

15 7 And also, too, moreover I also note that although the 8 union may not have come back following that vote with any 9 counterproposal to the Respondent's offer, there is some 20 10 evidence that the union did not believe that it was at impasse, 11 other than just the bald testimony of Mr. Negrotto. As 25 12 indicated previously, there was still a step to be followed by 13 the union after the vote on the contract, which would be the 14 strike vote. So until the union had actually gone about the 30 15 process of having a strike vote, it really was not in a position 16 to say that further bargaining would be fruitless or even to 35 17 fashion a counterproposal.

18 Obviously the strike vote would be important to the union
19 in being able to gauge the strength of the employees' feelings 40 20 towards rejection of the proposals that the Respondent had made.
21 If the employees had voted not to strike, then that certainly 45 22 would have been an indication to the union that maybe further 23 bargaining would be helpful, and counterproposal could have been 24 made with input from the membership. But the Respondent did not 50 25 await the outcome of a strike vote but instead chose to

1 implement the proposal immediately upon learning of the vote to 5 2 reject it.

3 Finally, I also note that, as I indicated previously, the 4 evidence of what took place in the meeting of -- the last face-10 5 to-face meeting before the storm on August 22, where there was 6 the give and take that one would expect to find in negotiations, 15 7 where the parties went through the proposals, paragraph by 8 paragraph, with the union indicating either agreement or 9 disagreement, and the parties suggesting that they would look at 20 10 economic items later, suggests that there was still room for 11 movement from the parties, that they had not exhausted all 25 12 possibilities of agreement, and that further meetings with a 13 real give and take on economic issues, a very paramount concern 14 to all parties, could actually have resulted in further 30 15 movement.

16 And also one other case that I will cite is the D.C.
35 17 Liquor Wholesalers case, which is at 292 NLRB 1234, a 1989
18 decision, enforced by the D.C. Court of Appeals at 924 F. 2d, 19 1078 (1991), where the Board essentially viewed facts as 40 20 indicating that the Respondent was imposing basically -- 21 unilaterally limiting the amount of discussion that could be had 45 22 over its last and final offer, and depriving the union of the 23 opportunity to full negotiate over that before declaring impasse 24 and implementing a lockout.

50 25 And here, I think because of the impact and the 1 intervention of the hurricane and the effect that had on the 5 2 lives of the bargaining-unit employees, as well as the 3 negotiators themselves and the operation of the union's business 4 and the company's business, the parties really had not had an 10 5 adequate opportunity to negotiate in good faith the significant 6 economic proposals that were being advanced by the Respondent.

15 7 Accordingly, based on the above, I find the parties were 8 not at a good-faith impasse on October 17, 2005, and that 9 therefore the Respondent's implementation of its October 13 20 10 last, best and final offer violated Section 8(a)(1) and (5) of 11 the Act as alleged by the General Counsel, with the exceptions
25 12 as to those specific changes that I found insufficient evidence 13 of.

30 14 I will recommend to the Board that it issue an order to 15 remedy these unfair labor practices that will require the 16 Respondent to rescind any of the changes that it has 35 17 implemented as a result on October 17, 2005, and to bargain in 18 good faith upon request with the union, maintaining the terms 19 and conditions of employment that existed before the change, 40 20 until such time as the parties have had an opportunity to 21 bargain in good faith to either a full agreement or a lawful 45 22 impasse.

23 Now, at this point, what I will do under the Board's rules 24 and regulations, I am required to await receipt of the 50 25 transcript. Then I will issue an order, certifying those

1 portions of the transcript pages containing my bench decision,
2 and that will be -- and I will also include in there basically a 3 full recommended order with the remedial provisions, so that the 4 parties will have that.

5
6 At that point, once you receive that decision and the 7 recommended order, all parties have the opportunity to take 8 exceptions to any of my findings of fact, conclusions of law, 9 any rulings I have made at the hearing here today, and I will 10 refer you to the statement of standard procedures in the Board's 11 rules and regulations with respect to the procedure for filing 12 exceptions with the Board in Washington.
